HOMESTAY

Homestay accommodations give you a room in a private house, living with a local host family. Usually you receive one - three meals per day, often one sitting down with the host family. This is an excellent option for someone learning English. To find a homestay, the ELA recommends the following resources:

Sara’s Homestay: This organization has a long history of experience matching international students with host families. All hosts are verified and have background checks, so you know they are safe and recommended. You can call or submit a request through their website:

My International Family: This organization matches international students and travelers with homestay families. Students will have a private room and three meals per day.

Richard Feldman: He knows over 20 families in the Chicago area that offer homestay accommodations. You can call or email him:
